

STRAIN

OF TRIAL PROVES TOO MUCH FOR MRS THOMAS

DEFENDANT SUFFERS COMPLETE COLLAPSE AT CHICAGO.

DEPOSITIONS NOW BEING READ

Testifying to the Good Character of Mrs. Ada Blady Thomas, a Former Newark Girl.

Chicago, March 20.—The reading of depositions testifying to Mrs. Ada Blady Thomas' good character was continued when the Thomas divorce case was resumed today.

Mrs. Thomas' attorney announced that he feared his client would be unable to appear in court today, having suffered complete collapse last night.

Chicago, March 20.—"Faithful in all respects" is the defense Mrs. Ada Blady Thomas is making in the case. She will deny all the allegations made against her by her husband, Harold Thomas. Under oath she will assert that she is a teetotaler, and that she knows naught of the places in which she is alleged to have been, and that at all times she has been faithful to the man whose name she bears.

Thomas, through his attorneys, admitted that Eleanor Augusta Thomas, the little girl who is with his wife, is the one born to Mrs. Thomas, and not a substitution. At the beginning of the trial it was declared that young Thomas would endeavor to prove that the child born of his marriage to Mrs. Thomas died a year afterward, and that the present child was substituted in order to extort money for its support. As telegraphed to the Advocate in Wednesday's dispatches, Harold I. Cleveland, a newspaper man, was chosen to put the black on Mrs. Thomas' character. Mr. Cleveland was aided by two women, Mrs. Louise Gray a quasi-detective from St. Louis, Mo., and Miss Alice O'Hare, a saleswoman in a Columbus (Ohio) dry goods store. This trio made oath that they had seen Mrs. Thomas in places where she had no right to be. They said they shadowed her in Columbus, and found her once in a saloon and once in a roadhouse, accompanied both times by men. No names were mentioned.

Mr. Cleveland, wearing a scarlet scarf and looking much like Hermann, the wizzard, took the stand early. January 1 he and Mrs. Gray went to Columbus to investigate Mrs. Thomas' conduct. They found her living at Long and Champion streets—a neighborhood known as "nigger heaven"—he said, and they discovered her one night in a questionable resort near by. He, Mrs. Gray and Miss O'Hare went to the resort early on New Year's night.

"You were watching for some one?" asked Mr. McShane.

"Yes; Mrs. Thomas."

"Did you see her?"

"I did. She went into Mooney's resort with two men and a woman and went upstairs."

"Did you see her again?"

"Yes, in Mrs. Gaber's roadhouse."

"Tell what you did and what you saw and all about it."

"We sat there for several hours. Then I went out of the rear door into the orchard, back again and upstairs. At the head of the stairs I met a man and a woman."

"Did you know the woman?"

"It was Mrs. Thomas. She was scantily clad, and so was the man."

At Mr. Barry's request Mr. Cleveland described Mrs. Thomas as a "little woman with a drawn face and an expressionless eye," but said he had seen her when she was plump and pretty. He denied that he had tried to take a snapshot of Mrs. Thomas in a compromising position at Mrs. Gaber's roadhouse.

"I understand, however, that such a snapshot was made," he said.

Then Mrs. Gray was called. Her husband is a machinist, and she acknowledged a long acquaintance with Cleveland. Her testimony was mainly corroborative of that given by Cleveland.

After Mrs. Gray had finished Miss Alice O'Hare, who confessed to 32 years, said she went with Cleveland and Mrs. Gray to "have a good time."

Dr. Frances Dickinson was the last witness for the plaintiff. She was called upon to give the testimony regarding ailments of women, and the evidence thus given proved highly diverting to the morbid listeners in the audience.

The entire afternoon was taken up with the reading of depositions from acquaintances of Mrs. Thomas, who live near her in Columbus. Eight of them were read, all declaring that she was a woman of sobriety and of good character.

Half a dozen well-dressed women, wearing jewels in profusion, fluttered into the courtroom for the purpose of testifying against young Thomas. They were brought there to substantiate the counter charges made by Mrs. Thomas. Owing to the reading of the depositions there was not time enough to hear them yesterday.

CHEWING GUM

Used Constantly by This Girl For Eighteen Years—An Operation. She Will Recover.

Toledo, O., March 20.—Matilda Ward, aged 22, of Ross township, Kalamazoo county, for many months has been suffering with what physicians claimed was acute indigestion. Many remedies were tried without relief. A surgical operation was resorted to and developed that the vital organs were apparently unting. Closer observation of the surgeons established the fact that a foreign substance was causing the adhesion. Upon critical examination the substance was ascertained to be chewing gum, of which Miss Ward had been a constant consumer for 18 years. She will recover.

House Committee on Public Works Having Trouble—Painter Bill Adversely Passed Upon.

Columbus, O., March 20.—Mr. Painter of Wood, author of the canal abandonment bill is in a quandary. He does not know whether his measure is dead or alive, although he does know that it is in great danger of strangulation by the committee on public works.

Tuesday night the committee decided to report the bill without recommendation. Wednesday morning the members experienced a change of heart, held a meeting and decided to lay it on the table and report the Seiber substitute. Promises, however, had been made that the Painter bill was to be allowed a place on the calendar, and the committee found itself in hot water. Men to whom these promises had been made clamored to have them fulfilled. A call was issued for a meeting of the committee Wednesday night, at which it was expected that the action of Wednesday would be rescinded and the Painter bill placed on the calendar. Not a member of the committee appeared at the house and no meeting was held. It is expected that a meeting will be held today. The canal men are bringing a terrific pressure on the members of the committee to compel them to stand by their action of Wednesday and report the substitute.

BOER

CAUSE FAVORED BY CAUCUS OF DEMOCRATS.

TO FORCE COMMITTEE TO REPORT RESOLUTIONS.

THE LIBERTY SPIRIT IS UPHELD.

Neutrality of This Government is Endorsed and Efforts at Mediation Are Approved.

Washington, March 20.—The Democratic members of the House at a caucus held last night unanimously adopted resolutions declaring that Congress should express the sympathy of the American people for the struggling Boer republics. The attendance was large. There was no division of sentiment as to the course to be taken, the question presented being simply one of choice between two resolutions, one offered by Mr. Randall of Texas and the other by Mr. Sulzer of New York. The Sulzer resolution was as follows:

Resolved by the Democrats of the House of Representatives of the United States of America in caucus assembled, That we sympathize with the Boers in their heroic struggle to maintain their liberty and independence and civilization against the continuation of a war which outrages the feelings of all liberty-loving people, and that we shall use our best efforts to have the Congress of the United States being committed to the principles of arbitration for the settlement of international disputes, request the President to urge upon the Government of His Majesty the wisdom of adopting this policy for the purpose of stopping the awful atrocities now going on in South Africa, and that the government of the United States should maintain a strict neutrality between the contending forces.

The Randall resolution was as follows:

Resolved, by the Democratic members of the House of Representatives of the United States of America in caucus assembled, That the Congress of the United States should, by resolution, express the sympathy of the people of the United States for the people of the South African Republic and the Orange Free State in their heroic struggle to maintain their liberty and independence.

Resolved, That the Congress should, in the spirit of unity and friendship, appeal to the British government, in the interest of humanity, to accept overtures for peace, cease hostilities and endeavor to bring about a just and honorable settlement of existing differences to the end that peace may be established.

Resolved, That the United States should fairly and honorably maintain a position of strict neutrality in this contest between nations friendly to us, and see to it that the neutrality laws are vigorously and impartially enforced.

Resolved That we as Democrats and representatives of the people will use our utmost endeavor to force the committee now dominated by the Republican party, having in their charge resolutions similar to these, to report the same back to the House so that the Congress may give expression thereon, declaring the sentiments and will of the American people.

After some remarks of Mr. Randall Mr. Sulzer and Mr. Cochran of Missouri, the Sulzer resolution was voted down—32 to 35—and the Randall resolution was then unanimously adopted. In pursuance of the action taken at the caucus a resolution will be framed for introduction into the House, and hereafter the Democrats will do everything in their power to secure action upon it.

STUDENTS SHOT

While a Pranks in New Concord—The Boys Attacked House Where the Sophs Were Feasting.

Zanesville, O., March 20.—Class rivalry at Muskingum College at New Concord, resulted in a shooting affray in which two students, Mark Roy of Bloomfield, O., and Floyd Kramer of Lebanon, O., were seriously wounded.

The sophomore class was holding a banquet at the residence of Mrs. M. E. Criswell, when it was surrounded by members of the freshman class, who broke in the lower story windows damaged the doors, demolished the pump, cut the wire clothesline and tied the doors with it.

Mrs. Criswell's eldest boy took his rifle to a window and opened fire on the party. The ball struck Mark Roy below the knee, mashing the bone and following it downward to the ankle, whence it was extracted. Floyd Kramer was shot in the thigh, the ball ranging inward and downward. It could not be located. The wound is a very serious one. The entire freshman class have been suspended pending an investigation of the affair.

DEFENSE CLOSES

Patrick Murder Trial Enlivened by a Tilt Between Court and Attorneys. End Draws Near.

New York, March 20.—Albert T. Patrick's defense closed yesterday in a grand burst of indignation from Attorneys House, Moore and Turner, who are defending him on the charge of murder. They announced immediately after Recorder Goff ruled out their first statement by their first handwriting expert that they would present no more evidence. After adjournment they declared that they had been unfairly treated by the Court and for that reason rested their case without calling their six handwriting experts.

Vast testimony of handwriting experts has often been disregarded by juries in other cases and the Patrick defense may not suffer any severe loss by the absence of theirs. Lawyers declare that they may even benefit by the spread of a theory among the jurors that they could have proved the genuineness of the will, the checks and the assignments produced by Patrick but for their clash with the Court.

From now until the case concludes it is plainly evident that war between Patrick's counsel and the Recorder will be waged fast and furious.

HUSBAND

Of Hetty Green the Richest Woman in the United States Died in Vermont Wednesday.

Bellows Falls, Vt., March 20.—Edward Green, husband of the eccentric and wealthy Hetty Green, died at his home here yesterday.

While Edward Green was one of the pioneers in the East India trade and accumulated a large fortune in the tea business, his chief distinction has been for many years that he was the husband of the richest woman in America. The great business ability of his wife and her eccentricities had kept him in the reflex before the eye of the world.

Mr. Green had passed his 80th year. When they were married he was worth millions and she had inherited $9,990,000 from her father.

They became estranged and lived apart in recent years because of financial losses he suffered in Wall street.

Today the man was identified as Joseph Hopkins, a crook.

ISSUE

AGAIN TO BE MADE OF THE OLD BLOODY SHIRT

DISFRANCHISEMENT IN SOUTHERN STATES

TO BE THE POLITICAL CAPITAL

On Which Republican Leaders Are to Rely—Will be Rushed Through the House.

Washington, March 20.—To provide material wherewith to fire the Northern and Western Republican heart, after the manner of the good old "bloody shirt" days, during the congressional campaign this fall is the sole object of the movements which have taken definite shape in the House of Representatives to bring about an investigation into the disfranchisement of voters in the South. It is the intention of the Republican managers to rush through, as soon as the Democrats will permit them the Crumpacker resolution providing for the investigation, which will be prosecuted with all speed, both here and in the Southern States that have disfranchised negroes, and also, probably, in Massachusetts and Rhode Island, where constitutions disqualify certain classes of persons from voting.

The work will be completed before the end of the present session, so that the report of the committee may be presented to the House and printed before adjournment.

The pamphlet, it is understood by the Republican managers, will furnish a rich line of material for the Republican campaign orators in the congressional campaign this fall, enabling them to show the Northern voter that his vote only counts for half as compared with the Southern voter, owing to the system of suppression of the negro vote in the South, while counting in the negroes as a basis for representation in Congress.

This sort of talk is depended on to make the Republicans forget all about the trusts, the tariff, and all the other issues likely to make them lukewarm in their allegiance to the old party, and cause them to throw up their hats for the flag and an appropriation, as in the reconstruction days of yore.

The Republican managers have no intention of attempting any legislation based on findings of their own investigators, for they are well aware it would be impossible to get any such legislation through the senate without a struggle for which they have no heart.

The Democrats will not be altogether left out in the political advantages of this program. The sectional aspect of the proceeding will undoubtedly have the same effect as the attempt to pass the Force bill under Harrison. It will make the Democrats forget all minor party differences, past and present, and solidify the party to a degree that has not been witnessed in ten years. The Democratic leaders know this, and are willing that the Republicans should start the ball rolling just as soon as they think it wise.

Debiture Suit.

Columbus, O., March 20.—C. H. Krippepender, who claims he paid to debentures $607.80 in the Ohio debenture company, has brought suit against A. D. Heffner and other officers of the company and also for $500 exemplary damages under the anti-gambling laws.

Nell Cropsey Case.

Elizabeth City, N. C., March 20.—Five lawyers have made their pleas in the battle James Wilcox, charged with the murder of Nell Cropsey, is making for his life. The leading attorneys on each side, Messrs. Ward and Ayldell, are addressing the jury today, and then the case will be submitted.

The time of the Court was taken up, wholly yesterday by the addresses of the different attorneys, nothing new transpiring. Mr. Bond spoke during the entire afternoon session. He said he would attempt to show there was not enough evidence to convict Wilcox nor even to show that Nell Cropsey was murdered by anybody.

IS THE A. T. RECKLESS?
Or is One of the Side Editors Again Making the Paper Look Ridiculous?

We are again compelled to call down the American Tribune for repeating its falsehood about the action of the Republican Councilmen in voting for the water works ordinance. In both cases the vote on the passage of the ordinance and the supplementary ordinance, was taken by a suspension of the rules. This required 12 votes and there were just 10 Democrats and 3 Republicans present. Hence the Democrats could not have passed either ordinance within the necessary time without the aid of the Republican members. We exposed the A.T.'s misrepresentation of this matter when the first ordinance was passed, but it again reiterates the same falsehood, though the same vote carried the last ordinance on Monday night.

Now, but one of two conclusions can be drawn from this. Either the A.T. is so reckless that it has no regard for truth, or else the side editor who wrote the last night's article did not know that the paper had been called down on the former misrepresentation.

Senator Vest's proposition that ships can be built in this country as cheaply as they can be built anywhere has been demonstrated to be true in various ways. It has been shown by the continuous growth of the shipbuilding industry and by the construction here of vessels for foreigners. It has been shown by repeated contracts of American firms for all sorts of structural iron and steel work secured in foreign countries against foreign competition. It has been shown by the testimony of experts in shipbuilding. There is no earthly justification for a donation of money to this industry.

FUNSTON AND HOAR.
We are glad to see the dressing-down Funston is getting for describing those who take the great liberty of differing with him in opinion—he has no judgment—on Philippine questions, the halter as much as deserters captured with arms in their hands. Funston is now in Washington, entertaining at the White House. Having this in view, the Washington Post institutes a comparison, with a statesman honored and respected throughout the land:

Mr. George F. Hoar, for instance, the senior senator from Massachusetts, is among those included in Funston's anathema; what will be the verdict of the American people on the spectacle of this blustering veteran of four years' growth hurling epithets at a man of Mr. Hoar's experience in National affairs? At the time of the outbreak of the war with Spain, Funston was a member of the editorial staff of one of the New York yellows. At the same time Mr. Hoar was entering upon his forty-sixth year of public service. He had served four terms in the House of Representatives, and was then nearing the end of his third term as United States Senator. He had been an overseer of Harvard university, president of the American Antiquarian society and of the American Historical association, a trustee of the Peabody fund, member of half a dozen other societies and academies; had received the degree of LL.D. from five different colleges, and was everywhere recognized as a scholar of unusual attainments, a citizen of unblemished patriotism, a gentleman of pure life and lofty character. Yet after a few months of bushwhacking in Luzon, Funston feels thoroughly qualified to come back to the United States and pass final judgment upon a statesman of Mr. Hoar's attainments and experience!

The Post compares the toasting and feasting of Funston at the capital with the "particularly strenuous rebuke" administered to General Miles by the President for an alleged offense against military proprieties. "General Miles," says that paper, "had made a brilliant reputation before young Funston was out of his diapers. General Miles was a conspicuous figure in a titanic war—a conflict compared with which our operations in the Philippines look like an ordinary Sunday night squabble in Goat alley. Yet General Miles was treated with a Beolian bludgeon, while for Funston there are only flowers and acclamations." Miles got his setting-down for presuming to agree with Admiral Dewey and the mass of the American people on the honors of the Santiago sea fight.

THE POWER OF RICH BRIEBERS.
(Pittsburg Post.)

One of the richest men in St. Louis Edward Butler, has been indicted by a grand jury for bribery in connection with getting street franchise ordinances through the city council. He seems to be proud of the distinction, and has openly boasted that he could pass through the municipal assembly any bill he wanted. This is not a novelty or confined to St. Louis. Under the machine system of politics and municipal administration, a select few and very often only one supreme will determine affairs and reaps the harvest. They do not hide their power under a bushel, but are inclined to boast of it.

IN THE AIR

The Germs of La Grippe are Conveyed Through the Atmosphere.

No one can escape the La Grippe germ because when an epidemic of the disease is prevailing the air is laden with it.

The reason that everyone does not have the disease at the same time is because the persons who are enjoying perfect health are able to successfully resist and throw off the infection, while those, who for any reason are not in the best of health, fall ready victims.

The first symptoms are those of acute catarrh resembling a hard cold and if prompt treatment is applied at this time, it can easily be broken up; one of the best remedies at this stage is Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, sold by druggists everywhere and if taken freely, say one tablet every hour for two or three days, the dangers of pneumonia and serious complications will be averted.

The Rev. L. E. Palmer, Baptist clergyman of Ceresco, Mich., makes a statement of interest to all catarrh and grip sufferers. He says Stuart's Catarrh Tablets have certainly been a blessing to me. I have used them freely this fall and winter and have found them a safeguard against La Grippe and catarrhal troubles from which I have suffered for years. I feel that I can freely and conscientiously recommend them.

Persons who suffer from catarrh of the head and throat are very susceptible to La Grippe and such will find a pleasant, convenient and safe remedy in this new catarrh cure. Stuart's Catarrh Tablets are composed entirely of harmless antiseptics and may be used as freely as necessary as they contain no cocaine, opiate or poisonous drug of any kind.

A RAFFLE FOR LIBERTY

(Original)

It was in the days of slavery in the south. A planter had died, and his negroes were to be sold under the hammer. A young mulatto, his wife and baby were about to be put up separately.

"Stop up, Ben," said the auctioneer. "Stop!" said a gentleman with a ruffled shirt front. "These three should go in one lot, huh."

"Reckon there's not money enough here in any pocket to buy 'em all, colonel."

"Try it, huh."

The auctioneer ordered the young mother with her babe on to the stand and called for bids, but there was no offer except from the colonel, and that was below the limit.

"I'll tell you what you'd better do," said the colonel—"raffle 'em. I'll take chances to the amount of my bid."

"I'll take an equal amount to the colonel's," said a man with a large diamond in his shirt bosom. As the disposition of the crowd seemed to favor the plan, it was adopted.

"They're worth $1,800," said the auctioneer. "Suppose we make it eighteen shares at $100 a share."

"I take 100 shares," said the colonel. "That lets me in for four," said the diamond stud man.

After some delay the shares were all taken except one.

"One chance left. Who takes it?" called the auctioneer.

Gentlemen," said the husband and father, "if the auctioneer will be so kind as to take my agreement for a hundred dollars in work I'll solemnly promise to pay the amount." He looked at the upturned faces wistfully.

Will Soon Be Crowned King.

The time will soon be here when Spain will have a king of her own. On May 17 the little prince will be of age, and his mother will no longer have any authority over him. Then he will take his place among the great men of the court. When he puts on the crown, he will have to say goodbye to all of his childish games. He intends to travel throughout his country and to learn all the causes of the recent troubles among his people. Until now he has spent all of his time at a summer resort, and he is little known to his people.

four months, when my husband became impatient because I grew worse instead of better, and in speaking to the druggist he advised him to get Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash. How I wish I had taken that at first; it would have saved me weeks of suffering. It took three long months to restore me, but it is a happy relief, and we are both most grateful to you. TWO KINDS OF LAW

(Original.)

After the hanging of Pat Evans for murder at Stony Gulch and the discovery of the real criminal the next day the population decided that Judge Lynch had held court in that location for the last time. A real bona fide judge was elected, before whom subsequent cases would be brought in obedience to the forms of law. Soon after the news of this radical change had got abroad there appeared at Stony Gulch something that had never been known there, before—a lawyer. Arrayed in a threadbare black suit, out at the elbows and the knees, he walked into the place and hung out a shingle bearing the euphonious name of Abdiel Silberbone.

No sooner was it known that real law was to dispense justice at Stony Gulch than crime became rampant. Houses were broken open and robbed, horses were stolen, and in less than a week, though there were but a few hundred people in the place, there was a murder case. Seth Skinner was asked for his watch in the center of the settlement in broad daylight, in presence of two witnesses, and upon his refusal was shot down in cold blood. The perpetrator had too much contempt for the law to disappear. Arrested and held for trial, he engaged the service of Abdiel Silberbone.

The legally elected judge sat upon the bench, and twelve good and true men listened to the evidence, which was so conclusive that there seemed to be nothing more to do but convict and hang the murderer. Indeed the jury was rising from the boards, supported by barrels, on which it sat to retire and finish the case when the attorney for the accused asked to be heard. By the first witness he proved that from the point he (the witness) viewed the shooting it was impossible that he could have seen the murder. The second witness he proved had defective eyesight. Then he proved that at the time of the murder the accused was playing a game of "seven up" at Mike Tooley's saloon.

There was consternation on the faces of all present.

"Gentlemen of the jury," said the judge, "you have heard the evidence. Is the prisoner guilty or not guilty?" "We would like to know, Judge," said the foreman, "if this case is to be decided whether the prisoner really killed Seth Skinner or what the evidence says about it."

The judge looked at the rafters and considered. "This case," he said presently, "is a case of law. You're to decide what the evidence says about it."

The jurymen filed out and, crossing the street, consulted in the corner of a saloon opposite. In an hour they returned to their seats.

"Waal?" said the judge. "We've found," said the foreman, "that on the evidence the prisoner is an innocent and powerful mistreated man."

There was a deep drawn breath from the spectators. The prisoner arose and put on his overcoat and hat.

"Gentlemen of the jury and citizens generally," said the judge, "the prisoner has been legally tried and found not guilty. Therefore he is discharged."

The murderer stepped toward the door. "One moment," said the judge. "It seems to me we've done our duty as good citizens in giving the prisoner a legal trial. That's cases even in the big towns where the law occasionally fails to dispense justice. We've tried the committee plan and the legal plan and they had failures under both of 'em. What do you say, gentlemen, ter applyin' both plans. I put it ter vote ter the citizens of this yere Stony Gulch. Shall we now try the prisoner before Judge Lynch?"

There was a spontaneous yell of assent. The prisoner sank back in terror. A new judge was selected, that there should be no complication between the civil and committee plans, and the jury was sworn in anew. All seemed at home under the new code, and the trial was brief and to the point. "You, Bill Jones," said the judge to the first witness—"did you see that ar' galoot shoot Seth Skinner?"

"You bet."

"That'll do. You, Tom Murphy—you seen the shootin'?"

"Reckon."

"You, jury, what hev you got ter say?"

The foreman then and there polled the jury and announced the result, which differed from the legal form in that it both convicted and passed sentence.

"Judge," said the foreman, "we've found the feller in 'verdict: We've gotter take that run up out of this court and make him dance whar the grass is too short."

"Hold on," said the judge. "While we're yere supposin' we settle another matter. It's my opinion that, while the majesty of the law is a good thing and should be always supported under all circumstances, every man havin' an equal chance under it before bein' tried under the committee plan—it's my opinion, I say, that lawyers hev a bad effect on justice and shouldn't be tolerated at Stony Gulch."

There was a growl of assent from the jury and the spectators.

"Whereas, ever, I, bein' duly appointed judge of all law matters comin' before this yere court, declar' ter you, Abdiel Silberbone, that you, ar' damned, assiduous, doctored serpent—if you're seen in this yere settlement after sunset to-morrow we'll ride you out on a rail."

The convicted man was then taken out and hanged. Just before sunset the lawyer was seen briskly walking down the road.

Dear Sir:

It is an admitted fact that you and those under your authority are subject to great exposure to wet and cold. The bane of men of your calling has always been the danger of Liver, Kidney and Lung Diseases. Exposure to a thorough drenching, with unavoidable delay in getting into warm and dry clothing, is sufficient to induce an attack which leaves the patient with chronic kidney weakness. Do you know that the most successful medicine ever discovered for these diseases is Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy? Mr. M. M. Mackall, of Lomin, O., member of Hose Co. 2, writes us the following:

"I suffered dreadfully from kidney trouble. Nothing I took helped me until my druggist recommended Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. It went right to the spot, and I can but feebly express my appreciation of its great curative power."

If you or any of your friends would like to test this great medicine, we will send you enough for trial on request, free, by mail. Very truly yours, Dr. David Kennedy Corporation.

CEDAR CAMP

Sends Team to Cambridge to Confer the Woodmen Degree on a Large Class Thursday.

The celebrated team of Cedar Camp, No. 4727, Modern Woodmen of America, is fast acquiring a state and national reputation. Their services are constantly in demand at various points throughout the state in the performance of their elaborate team work. The team left this afternoon for Cambridge, where they will confer the Woodmen degree tonight on a large class of candidates. The initiatory work is to be followed by a banquet and a general good time.

Wooster—Wooster University has just received another evidence of the good will and friendship of L. S. Severance of Cleveland, who recently gave $50,000 for a chemical laboratory to be known as Severance Hall. The plans approved by him were found too elaborate and it was decided to cut them down so as to make the cost come within the sum pledged by Mr. Severance. When he was consulted he said he would pay the difference, about $15,000.

TONIGHT

Newark Republicans Will Nominate Candidates for Mayor and Other Offices—Matticks Leading.

Several of the Republican candidates for Mayor are out today making a hustle to capture the nomination, which will be handed to somebody at the city convention which meets this evening in the convention room of the court house at 7:30 o'clock. Mr. O. C. Jones has seen the handwriting on the wall which reads "Frank A. Bolton, Mayor of Newark," and has withdrawn from the race, leaving as the only avowed candidates: W. C. Seward, C. E. Moore, Dr. S. H. McCleery and D. W. Matticks.

Those most outspoken say that Matticks and McCleery are leading in the race, but there is an undercurrent which seeks to force the nomination on Judge Jonathan Rees. Judge Rees, so far as known, has made no noisy effort to get the nomination, but is said to be a "receptive" candidate.

An impartial view of the situation indicates that D. W. Matticks will either land the nomination or come very close to it.

It makes little difference to the Democracy which one of the five men named win tonight's contest. His triumph will end right there, for Frank A. Bolton, the Democratic candidate, is receiving encouragement from every section of the city. Many well known Republicans, especially among the young, active men of the city, have signified their intention of supporting him, and he will command the support of his party also. Mr. Bolton, young, active, loyal to his friends, of unquestioned integrity and ability, fully capable of administering the affairs of the city on the platform or on the police court bench, is proving to be one of the most popular candidates ever before the people.

Nobody can say a word against the character of Mr. Bolton, no one for an instant questions his ability. He is making a good clean race and as the election approaches, he is daily adding to his great number of friends. Mr. Bolton has made no ante-election promises but he may be relied upon to govern the city with justice, impartiality and credit to himself and to the whole people.

NATURE FORGIVES.

NERVOUS DEBILITY, WEAK NERVES, DESPONDENCY, EXHAUSTION, AND SLEEPLESSNESS CURED.

BY DR. GREENE'S NERVURA.

Persons who formerly possessed healthy bodies and strong and steady nerves, wonder at a feeling of exhaustion, lassitude, and lack of inclination for physical or mental exertion. There is now only a sense of weakness, languor, dulness, and exhaustion. The nerve strength seems impaired, their endurance and power to work, read, or study is diminished. The thoughts wander and there is inability to fix the mind for any length of time upon one subject; with this there is an extremely nervous and irritable condition, a dull, cloudy sensation, a sense of apprehension, often accompanied by disagreeable feelings in the head and eyes. There may be a derangement of the digestive organs, with a gradual failing of strength, and weakness, weariness, and pain in the back. There is often a bad taste in the mouth mornings, the vision becomes dim, the memory is impaired, and there is frequent dizziness. Persons thus affected are often diffident, despondent, and discouraged. The nerves become so weakened after a time that the least excitement or shock will flush the face, bring on a tremor or trembling, often attended by more or less palpitation of the heart.

If you have these symptoms, or a portion of them, you are suffering from nervous debility caused by an exhausted condition of the nerve and vital powers from overwork, excesses or indiscretions, which is slowly but surely sapping your strength, energies, life. But kind Nature forgives; there is one sure remedy to cure you, to save you from nervous prostration, insanity, paralysis, despair, and death, and that is that wonderful discovery, that vitalizing invigorator, Dr. Greene's Nervura.

This wonderful restorative of brain, nerve, and body will give back to the weakened and exhausted system the strength that it has lost. It will impart strength and vigor to the brain and nerves, vitalize and invigorate all the physical powers, and restore you again to that grand degree of lusty strength, of bounding pulse and strong physical and nerve power, which by overwork, ignorance, or folly you have exhausted.

Do not fail to use Dr. Greene's Nervura if you value life and happiness. Especially do you need it now as a spring remedy.

You can also consult with Dr. Greene about your case, without charge, either by calling at his office, 101 Fifth Avenue, New York City, or writing him a full description of your case. Dr. Greene is the most successful specialist in the world in curing diseases of this character, and you can write him with perfect confidence and assurance of cure.

CORN HARVESTER

Invented by Jasper Jones, Model of Which is at Fourth Street Planing Mill This City.

Mr. Jasper Jones of the Fourth street planing mill, is the inventor of a corn harvester which has a number of fine points which, the inventor claims, will make the machine superior to the harvesters now on the market. Mr. Jones has been at work on the machine for the past five years and says that he has at last perfected one that will do excellent work and at a moderate outlay of money to the farmer. The machine has a platform which is movable; on the front of this are the knives or rather sickles by which the corn is cut. The movable platform then carries the stalks to the rack holds them in place and at the rack holds them in place and at the same time shapes the shock when it is tied. The sack then opens automatically and places the shock on the ground in a perfectly upright position.

The machine will cut two rows of corn at a time and the shock can be composed of either one hundred or two hundred hills. Two horses are to be used one on each side of the harvester, being fastened to the rear, thereby making the draft on the center and at the same time making it much lighter than any machine made.

Mr. Jones has a model of his machine at the Fourth street planing mill.

SPECIAL MEETINGS

Begin at First Methodist Church—A Large Audience Present First Night—Splendid Sermons.

The special meetings at the First M. E. church began Wednesday with great interest, the audiences being as large as ordinarily after meetings have been in progress for a week or more. Everybody seemed well pleased with the workers and their work. At two o'clock Dr. McLaughlin addressed the people from Eph. 5:18. "Be not drunk with wine, wherein is riot, but be filled with the Spirit." It was a most original and striking sermon in which he drew some very effective contrasts and parallels between the wine-intoxicated and the Spirit-filled man. "Alcohol," he said, "is the devil in solution." The drunken man obeys the spirit of wine, the Spirit-intoxicated man the Spirit of God. The drunken man has a peculiar walk, so does the Christian. The drunken man has no fear of dying in the "poor-house," or of what people say, neither does the Spirit-filled person. Both of them get a vision of the place to which they are going.

Dr. Fowler preached a scholarly and effective sermon at night on the theme "Strengthening the Disciples" from Act 18:23. The sermon set forth the Apostolic method of building up and establishing the life of the churches, and gave the key note of the "Forward Movement." Several ministers were in the meetings and all are invited. Services at 2 and 7:15 each day, including Saturday. The audience last night almost filled the auditorium.

BANQUET

HELD BY THE COURT AND JURY AT KUSTER'S.

Proposed to Make Reunion an Annual Affair—An Acquaintance of Long Ago is Renewed.

The banquet given at Kuster's restaurant by the Petit Jurors Wednesday evening was a decided success in every particular and the members of the committee in charge of the affair have great reason to congratulate themselves. The dinner was given in the ladies' dining room on the second floor and at the long table, which had been prettily decorated for the occasion sat twenty-six guests. The banquet was presided over by Judge Charles W. Seward, the present judge, who after the discourse of the many good things which had been prepared by Mine Host Kusser, opened the speaking, with a short history of juries and their origin and the benefits to mankind by this system which was started in the time of King John of England. Following the Judge, Mr. James R. Fitzgibbon, the Prosecutor, made a few short remarks which brought a good round of applause. Sheriff W. H. Anderson said he was not supposed to be a talker but an actor, but he gracefully made a few remarks.

Clerk of the Court O. C. Larason told of the crude jury system in vogue in this country and England when the countries named were young.

Mr. W. D. Benner and Deputy Sheriff Wm. Linke both told good stories which produced much laughter.

Mr. John Hughes thanked the Judge and the officials of the court for the many kindnesses shown the members of the jury and assured those men that they would ever have the good will of the jurors. A number of others also made remarks.

Before the meeting adjourned Prosecutor Fitzgibbon on behalf of the committee in charge of the banquet, announced that the jury had decided to make the dinner and reunion an annual affair and extended a very cordial invitation to all those present to be with them next year, when the pleasant time would be repeated at Idlewild Park.

Stiff Joints

Omega Oil What a stiff joint needs more than anything else is Omega Oil. The next need is plenty of massage, or rubbing. The rubbing makes the blood flow faster, and the Oil loosens up and softens the hard, stiff places. The first thing to do with a stiff joint in machinery is to oil it, and then work it back and forth until all the stiffness is gone. Now, as a matter of fact, your body is a machine, not of iron, but flesh, muscles and joints, and you want to keep it well oiled with Omega Oil if you expect to have it in good running order. This is common sense, and every one knows it to be the truth.

RAILWAY AFFAIRS.

JUDGE WILL PUSH CASE TO THE LIMIT AGAINST B. & O.Says He Was Put Off Train on Midland Division—Trial Next Week.
Local Notes.

Washington C. H., March 20.—The case of Judge James L. Zimmerman against the B. & O. railroad company for $1900 damages will begin in the Common Pleas Court here on next Monday. The case grows out of the alleged ejection of the Judge from a B. & O. passenger train by the conductor at a small station this side of Cincinnati because the Judge refused to pay his fare, although he offered the conductor mileage for the trip. When the Judge went to the depot to get his exchange ticket for his mileage for the trip (he having a one-thousand mile mileage book) the depot was closed, and it is said, remained closed so that he could not make the exchange.

Thinking, as he claims, that the failure on his part to make the exchange was the fault of the railroad company he explained the matter to the conductor after he got on the train, but the conductor demanded cash fare, refusing to accept the mileage. The Judge refused to pay the cash, and the conductor told him that in that case he would have to get off the train.

"I shall not get off unless you put me off by force," said the Judge. The conductor then took him by the coat sleeve and walked with him to the car door and gave him a little push off the step to the platform of the station where the train had stopped. The Judge thereupon took a return train to the starting station, gathered up all the evidence he could, and after returning to the city instituted suit.

The case is attracting considerable attention from the traveling public throughout the state, especially among the commercial travelers who say they are often caught in just such a situation as the Judge found himself in when the railway station was closed. The plaintiff is Judge of the Probate Court of Fayette county, and he says he intends to push the case to the limit.

CODE BILL

SURROUNDED BY TOO MANY "IFS"
TO PASS QUICKLY.Some Say the Measure Will Pass and Others Insist That It Cannot Pass
This Session.

(Columbus Dispatch.)

"If" all the "ifs" could be eliminated from the discussion of the Pugh-Kibler municipal code bill, that measure would be enacted into a law within the next twenty-four hours. But if the various objections to the measure coming from various parts of the state were to be stricken out and the bill passed, even its own authors would be unable to recognize it.

There are those who say the bill will pass and there are those who say it will not. Both claimants for prophetic honor seem to know something of what they speak, but there is no man now who can tell whose judgment in this matter is best.

Objections to the bill are coming from Cincinnati and Cleveland. Delegations continue to present arguments to the committee on municipal affairs for the bill, and petitions, memorials and instructions are pouring in for the benefit of the individual members to vote or oppose the bill as the case might be.

There is little doubt but that the committee will recommend the bill and that the real fight on the measure will be pulled off on the floor of the house. What will happen then will be of great interest, for every town in the state almost will be affected. The supreme court is assisting the passage of the bill perhaps not intentionally of course, by continuing the dismissal of all the cases brought under the provision of acts of special legislation. Cities which want bonds are scared and all reorganization bills, bond issues and other measures are being held in abeyance to see what the fate of the Pugh-Kibler bill will be.

WATCH THE COOK

Careless Preparation of Food Responsible for Stomach Troubles.

The selection and preparation of our food has more to do with our health than many suppose. The great American disease, dyspepsia, originates in a majority of cases in the kitchen. The food is poorly prepared, improperly cooked and the stomach can not digest it.

Take, for instance, oatmeal; a few cooks take the trouble to cook it five hours, most of them only to boil it a few moments and consider it ready to be served. The result is that when taken into the stomach in this condition, it forms a starchy, sticky mass, and not only is a burden for the stomach to handle, but retards the digestion of other foods. It has been stated by prominent physicians that oatmeal and other cereals that were not properly cooked were one of the prime causes of dyspepsia. Always cook the cereal breakfast foods five hours.

The safest and most economical food to serve is Malt-Nut. It is a combination of malted grains that have been carefully cooked twice, thus turning the starch into dextrin, and rendering it easy of digestion and assimilation. The product is then treated to the emulsified oil of nuts. The grains thus prepared, build brain and muscle and the nut oils fat and tissue. One pound of this scientific combination of nature's food is equal in food elements to four pounds of beef.

It not only appeals to the good judgment of those who would preserve their health, but to the thrifty housewife, for all it requires is a little milk poured over a few teaspoonsful, and it is ready to be served. The rich, nutty flavor obtained by the process of manufacture makes it delicious.

The top of the package contains several recipes for serving Malt-Nut in dainty puddings, etc.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF A SOLDIER

(Original.)

There are men physically and morally brave; there are men physically brave and morally cowards; there are men physical cowards and morally brave. This is a story of one who belonged to neither of these classes.

Willie Huggins was a delicate child. He shrank from firecrackers on the Fourth of July, and a sharp report close to his ear always made him start. He grew up to be just such a man as he had been a child—timid, shy, reserved.

When Willie Huggins was twenty—he was still called Willie instead of Will—he fell desperately in love with Helena Gunter. He was captivated by Helena's flashing dark eyes and regular features, of a commonplace type. It is true, but the kind likely to attract a very young fellow with plenty of imagination to make them appear beautiful. He wooed Helena by some very delicate compliments in verse. They had no effect upon her. One of his schoolmates, Mary Crane, with whom he had always been friends, was Willie's confidant in the matter. Mary advised him either to let Helena alone or woo her in a more practical way, since she would not know the difference between poetic fervor and doggerel. About that time war broke out, and Willie was given to understand that Helena would not bestow her favor on any but a soldier.

Willie did not wish to be a soldier, but he wanted Helena; so he enlisted. His friend Mary told him that it was well enough for him to serve his country, but to take up arms for Helena Gunter or any other girl was, to say the least, unwise. This remark impressed him, and he resolved that he would do his duty on principle as well as for love.

When Willie heard that the enemy was entrenched twenty miles away and the command was going to dislodge it, he fell into a violent tremble. During the march he recovered somewhat, and when the men began to deploy for an attack he experienced a mild excitement which he mistook for bravery. The illusion was dispelled when bullets began to cut the twigs above his head, singing their spiteful little songs. His legs, over which he had no control, turned him around and were carrying him in the opposite direction when he ran up against the point of a sword in the hands of an officer and was forced to turn about and face the enemy.

Willie had gone to the war for love and had decided to be brave from a sense of duty as well. Neither of these availed to induce bravery. In vain he fixed his mind on Helena; in vain he thought of his duty to his country. His legs still took him in the wrong direction.

The fights in which Willie was at first engaged were unimportant affairs and soon ended. If he was so frightened in a skirmish, what would be his condition in a battle? He began to dread the terrible disgrace that he was sure was in store for him more than the battle itself. When it came, he nerved himself to go through it without flinching. He did better than before because he had become a veteran, though there was the same cowardly heart. His regiment was drawn up behind a hill, the men resting on their arms in reserve. They could not see the enemy, but shells coming over the hill were dropping among them. Then they were advanced into an open plain. Willie felt somewhat relieved. He found he did not dread an enemy he could see so much as one he could not see.

The men were ordered to lie down and fire from behind a low breastwork. A bullet came along and grazed his elbow, burning him. He felt a momentary desire to hit the man who sent it. Then his bat was knocked off. He began to be irritated. By this time he had suffered so much from fear that he had lost some of the dread of being killed. The next tap he got was on the shoulder, and it made him very angry. A soldier beside him gave a groan and rolled over on his back. Willie began to boil. A man crawled out of a hole a dozen yards in advance, got up on his feet, tottered a short distance back toward cover and was knocked down by a fragment of a shell. Willie felt that he would like to head a regiment and take the battery that fired that shell. The wounded man was lying in an exposed position, and Willie, heedless of the terrific fire, got up, went out to the man and dragged him back to cover. A shout went up along the line of those who saw the act. Willie, unconscious that such a coward as himself had done anything remarkable, did not suppose they were cheering him for an act of bravery.

All the officers of his company having been killed in the battle, Willie was made captain. Having found it so hard to take himself into action, he dreaded attempting to lead others. Strangely enough, the responsibility caused him to forget his danger, and he made a very good officer. He rose to be major, which office he was promoted to just before the close of the war.

When he got home, he found that Helena Gunter had married a ladies' tailor. Mary Crane had heard of the major's final success as a soldier, and though she had believed there was sufficient pride in him not to disgrace himself, she was somewhat surprised and much gratified at the result. Meeting Helena, he was surprised at her commonplace appearance. He was as much surprised that he had not, indeed, fallen in love with Mary, who had always had a secret fancy for him, but he made up for lost time by an early proposal.

AMUSEMENTS.

It is probable that no play written in recent years so thoroughly abounds in sparkling humor and wit as does "The Girl From Chilli" which comes to the Auditorium Friday night, March 21. The play is one which masquerades a young man in feminine attire, but to the discomfort of himself and a host of friends, and all to escape the persistent determination of a dashing young woman who is madly in love with him, when he as a matter of fact is to be married that very day to another. The players are all people of established reputation, prominent among them being Marie Lamour and Frederic Murphy, who starred with considerable success in that well known comedy "A Wise Woman." Another valued member of the company is Miss Ethel Balch, who for several seasons was the prima donna of the Castle Square Opera company.

The patrons of the Auditorium are promised a very sensational and extremely singular exhibition on Saturday next, March 22. The marvelous Lintons in their mystic attraction. The mysterious "Lady in Trance," an astounding and bewildering performance. The prices are lowered to 10, 20 and 30 cents.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Window Pictures.

Dolly was cross because it rained and she could not take a ride on her new tricycle. She pouted, scolded and stomped around so that her mamma had to order her to sit down in her little rocking chair and not stir until the baby was lushed to sleep.

So Dolly sat there sullenly, watching the merry raindrops roll down the window. Presently she became interested in them.

First one little shining fellow would hang on the upper ledge in some mysterious fashion; then he would tumble and roll down; another followed him swiftly; then two more would chase him and a fifth bravely join the race. Sometimes a pair of drops would run together and meet, "just like two sisters hugging and kissing each other," Dolly thought.

Sometimes, too, there would be a whole row strung out like shining beads on a silver thread.

After awhile there was a puddle of them on the broad window ledge. Suddenly there was a whirling of wings, and a sparrow flew down. He drank daintily; then he took a little bath, splashing the water lustily.

Presently he caught sight of the reflection of himself in the pane and began to ruffle up his feathers and strut pompously up and down. Then he gave an angry little peck at the glass.

Dolly giggled, and with a goodby chirp the bird flew away.

A leaf from the woodbine blew against the pane. It looked very pretty, just as if it were cut out of brown and purple satin. A red and black ladybug crawled over it, keeping on its outer edges, away from the wet.

There was a spider web in one corner. Its silken threads were broken down by the shower, and the spider hurried back in his den, dragging a dead, slim waisted, blue black wasp.

From the window Dolly caught a glimpse of a bit of the road where Mrs. O'Brien's ducks were paddling about in the puddles. The butcher's boy rattled by in his red cart, and after him Dr. Pillsbury, all muffled up in a mackintosh. Then little Billy Dodge trotted by, his face as red as a peony, his fat legs in new rubber boots and holding a big umbrella that wobbled in the wind. Now a western breeze came rushing along, plucking the yellow leaves from the hickory tree—away they flew like a flock of canaries! The sun peeped out from behind a cloud, and the drops on the window sill were changed into rainbow tints. The storm was over.

"What makes you so quiet, deary?" said mamma gently.

Dolly drew a long breath and turned a smiling face toward mamma. "I have been having a good time," she said, "watching pictures in the window frame!"—Mary E. Q. Brush in Youth's Companion.

Written by a Nine-year-old.

One day puss saw a bird sitting on the edge of a tub. She was thinking it was pretty near dinner time, so she crept slowly and softly through the cabbages, wriggled her body a little bit, swished her tail a little and gave a spring. Poor puss! She did not know there was water in the tub. She went into the water with a great splash. Away flew the bird; out came puss, a poor, drenched cat, about half her size. Just then Alice and Tom came out of the house. They took poor puss up, and Alice took her in her apron and put her in the house beside the stove. In an hour puss was all right again, but she never went after a bird on a tub unless she knew whether there was water in it or not. She had learned a lesson from that she never forgot.—David Manley in Philadelphia Ledger.

HATS FOR EASTER.

They Are Generally Trimmed With Flowers, Chiffon and Maltines. (Special Correspondence.)

New York, March 17.—If there is any young lady who wishes to make for herself a very dainty and youthful appearing summer dress, she can do so if she will follow the lines laid down in this letter. First the simplicity of the style is a recommendation, and secondly the real beauty of the whole garment makes it one to desire and, desiring, copy. And it is one of those adapted to all reasonable materials. The square neck and elbow sleeves make it rather more suitable for a summer gown, except when it is intended for a semigrand occasion like a dinner, or it can be worn as a tea gown, for quite young ladies do not as a general rule go about in those long and loose dresses, heretofore so popular. Tea gowns are naturally to be seen, but not to the same extent they were some three seasons ago.

This dress is made of cream mistral over a slip of taffeta of the same shade. There is a shaped flounce scarcely held full and joined to the bottom by a silk covered cord. The waist is a simple blouse shape, with a rich lace application like a pointed yoke down the front and around the shoulders in the back. The sleeves end just below the elbows and are finished off with rows of lace applique insertion. A violet velvet belt encircles the waist, and to this is fastened a scarf of wide ribbon in the new soft quality and printed with large but vaguely outlined flowers in shaded violet.

All the violet and helio shades are to be very prominent in all things this season. Violets are seen on so many of the new hats that I should not be at all astonished to see the fancy grow to a rage before spring fairly opens.

Speaking of violets reminds me that the Easter hats are now on view, and some of them are really worthy of the name of "creations," for surely human hands could not have produced such wonders. Tip tilted hats and those set at an acute angle, also dipped down over the face and set back from it so as to leave the forehead exposed, we see among the shapes.

As to materials there is no limit, for everything has been utilized for lovely woman's headwear. Straw naturally is the foundation, at least for the crowns, and some of the brims have straw of some kind on the upper side, while the lower one is a mass of ruffled, shirred or folded chiffon. Chiffon, that useful and almost ubiquitous flimsy stuff, is even more than ever popular for all sorts of hats in trimming or as component parts of the whole. And it deserves the favor it receives.

To particularize, I will mention a yellow straw. Nearly all the straws are coarse. This is trimmed by a loosely draped chiffon scarf in which are twined and twisted any number of lovely tea roses with their buds and foliage. Under the brim, which is tilted sharply at the left side, is a bunch of the roses set very closely. This is very dainty.

A black chiffon is shirred over a wire frame, and the left side is raised so high that the hat seems ready to fall from the head, and it would were it not for the velvet band placed along the side, which forms the foundation for a full rousette of black chiffon edged with narrow gilt braid. On the left side of the hat is an enormous bunch of yellow roses and half opened buds. Very little foliage is put among these bunches of roses; but, on the other hand, there are some hats with nothing but foliage. I saw one fine and smooth straw with a great mass of shaded green rose leaves. Another had shaded violet leaves. A twisted band of violet velvet surrounded the crown.

One or two hats had loops of velvet ribbon about an inch wide placed at the back, where they could droop over the hair. Violet and heliotrope shades are always pretty for millinery and, judiciously placed, are not unbecoming to anybody, even the sallow complexioned women.

A handsome hat is one where the rather large crown is of yellow straw, and the brim—well, it is impossible to say of what this is, as it is completely covered with white maltines.

One very stylish affair has a rough black straw faced with black velvet and around that four extremely narrow lines of white chiffon shirring. At the left side is an immense rousette of the white. Chiffon, black and white, takes such a great place in the spring millinery that one can scarcely go astray in using it.

A FOOL'S LUCK

(Copyright, 1902, by C. B. Lewis.)

I had been sent over to Paris to close up a certain business deal with a French firm and bring back $10,000 in cash. I call it a business deal, but now that many years have elapsed and no harm can come of it I may say that it had to do with laces which had escaped paying full duty at the New York custom house. This I did not find out for myself until years afterward.

I was to be allowed two weeks to see the sights of Paris, and, being a young man of twenty-four, it was right and proper that the head of the firm should give me a lot of fatherly advice as to how to take care of myself. When I came to think it all over afterward, I could not help but see that he had been more interested in the safety of his cash than in my moral welfare.

I had been in Paris just one day when I made a friend, and it came about in a curious way. I had found my way to the Bois and taken a seat on a bench occupied by a man asleep. I gave him no attention, and it was while my back was toward him that he was suddenly seized and hurled across the path by a young man of about my own age whose looks proved him a gentleman. As the fellow arose and sneaked off the young man explained to me in fairly good English that the cannibal was trying to pick my pockets as he came up. I felt under obligations, of course, and as he sat down on the bench beside me and entered into conversation I found him an agreeable gentleman. He was a man about town with plenty of money, and there was a time when his name, D'Arcy, had been enrolled among the nobility of France. I didn't think it at all singular that he "look" to me and hoped I would permit him to make my stay pleasant. I was conceited enough to think it my due and to wonder a bit why the rest of Paris had not heard of my arrival.

In the course of two or three days Gustav D'Arcy and I had become chummy. He had told me all about the estates he had fallen heir to and the improvements he was making to his different town houses and country seats, and I had turned myself inside out to him. There was only one thing that I kept back, and that was about the $10,000, but the week had not ended when a glass too much made me boast of that. If my father had only been a Frenchman, I should have claimed Gustav as a half brother or something of that kind and been proud of the tie. I think he referred to that $10,000 on several occasions, but carelessly, as became a young man of millions, and he came to know the value of the fact that he was to lose me next day. When he could clock back his emotion, we opened a bottle of champagne, our last and fifteen minutes after drinking my first glass of it I was lying on the floor fast in a stupor. The gallant and sorrowful hearted Gustav had given me knockout drops. He had probably learned the trick from his friend Jones while taking in the flowery. All I remembered was feeling sleepy. The chevalier probably lost no time in possessing himself of those bank notes as soon as I was helpless, and he had been gone twenty-four hours before I could tell the story to a policeman brought in by the landlord. That policeman was very good and courteous. He may have had me a hauled and a flogged, but, for the life of me, he said nothing whatever about my feelings, and even when I was found that Gustav had taken me.

DAINTY SUMMER GOWN.

not for the velvet band placed along the side, which forms the foundation for a full rousette of black chiffon edged with narrow gilt braid. my last cent. He hadn't left me watch or pin to raise the amount of my hotel bill on.

I was lying in bed, with a head that seemed big enough to fill the whole room, when the policeman returned after two hours' absence. I was routed out of bed and put in a carriage and taken to a hospital to identify my dear Gustav. There was no trouble about that. He lay there with a broken leg, and his features had undergone no change. Six hours after robbing me, while on his way to the depot to take a train, his cab had been upset and he had received his hurt. He wasn't a bit glad to see me, but still he carried the thing off very well. He remarked that I was the biggest fool and the softest mark he had run across during his career and advised me to accept of a legal guardian as soon as I returned to the United States. He had everything he had robbed me of, and when I expressed my surprise that a seign of nobility should descend to knock out drops and robbery he laughed in chorus with the officers. There were certain formalities to be gone through with before my property was restored to me, and during the interview I learned that my affectionate D'Arcy had been playing the confidence game for the last fifteen years and that he had seen the inside of prison on three or four different occasions. "A fool for luck," however, and there was no exception in my case. I came out of the affair all right, and, though Gustav had served me rather a shabby trick, I was pleased to learn as I left Paris that his broken bones were knitting and he would not be a bowlegged aristocrat when able to walk out once more.

Early Spring Garden Hints.

Was your garden dug up in the fall? It should be getting pulverized by frosts and air and be more easily worked in spring.

Is your chimney full of soot? Clean it and save the soot. It is a splendid fertilizer and preventive of insects, especially around fruit trees and bushes.

The garden is the best paying part of the farm. You don't believe it! Well, keep an account of it next summer and see if it's not.

Do not think because certain vegetables are cheap it doesn't pay to grow them. The chances are they may produce three or four times more value on the same piece of ground than fancy vegetables, with far less work.

Care of Grapevines.

Perhaps that grapevine has bothered you a good deal and given but few grapes. Give it a severe pruning. Cut out all last year's growth except three or four buds next the old wood. If you have allowed the vines to grow old in length, cut off freely of this old wood. Put up a good post to hold the old vine and what support is needed, either by frame or wire, for the growing wood. Then give a good mulch and cultivate during the summer. The main reason for early pruning is to prevent bleeding, as this weakens the vine when done in the flush of spring-time.

The Successful Farm Dairyman.

The farmer who keeps up the fertility of his soil selects his seed for corn fodder, properly harvests and takes care of his crop, feeds his home grown grains or buys commercial feeds provided they are cheap enough, feeds mixed grains in moderate amounts, eight to ten pounds per day; stables his cattle in light, well ventilated and clean surroundings, does not forget to use salt and, above all, to mix along with his feeds a grain of common sense, and is not afraid of work will make a success of dairying.—Hairy and Creamery.

Fruit in Mississippi.

Truck farmers and fruit growers in the southern portion of the state of Mississippi report that the prospect is for one of the finest fruit crops the state has ever had. The weather has been continuously cold for two months, and the buds have not dared to swell. The indications now are that Mississippi will yield in peach cobbles next summer and orchardists will make a pretty penny.—Evening Scimitar.

INA RUSSIAN CHURCH

EASTER SERVICES AMONG THE CZAR'S SUBJECTS IN PARIS.

Travelers From All Countries Flock to the Greek Church in Paris on Easter Sunday—Vivid Contrasts and Glorious Bass Voices.

(Special Correspondence.)

Paris, March 5.—A spectacle to the eye at once tawdry and splendid, to the ear wholly entrancing, is afforded by the music and ceremonies at the Russian Greek church in this city on Easter Sunday. Under the Russian calendar Easter comes sixteen days later than among adherents of the Roman and Protestant faiths, so here we have two Easters, the Russian one eclipsing in pomp and splendor the Christian one.

The church itself, with a vast oriental dome overhead, is finished and furnished in a style of almost barbaric splendor to appeal to the eye of those who worship in it, some of whom are at least half barbaric. Hundreds of thousands of rubles have been lavished on the architecture, on the painting and gilding, on the gorgeous, dazzling altar furnishings and images. Yet, like oriental edifices of devotion, there are almost no seats. The congregation, millionaires or beggars, must stand or "dop" upon their knees and mutter prayers, which many, even millionaire men and women, do.

It is the place of contrasts. The two extremes of the peoples of all the Russian come here on Easter Sunday to do penance in a heap for the sins they have committed during the past few months. At Easter all alike must come, pray and look solemn an hour or two, at the close of the magnificent rites be brushed with a palm branch dipped in consecrated water, then up and away again to sin or otherwise perhaps till next Easter.

Here a Russian of commanding stature, possibly the ambassador himself, noble featured, immaculately groomed, as royal, as handsome, as intellectual a specimen of humanity as can be found on this earth, stands and mutters devoutly his prayers. Men stand mostly; women kneel, and kneel upon what to western ideas is a very dirty floor.

Not far from the splendid big Russian is maybe a group of dingy, stupid Tartars, undersized, with slit eyes, snub noses, flat, narrow foreheads and features altogether of a primitive type. They are dirty, heaven save us! How unpleasant to come close to! They are common laborers, stevedores, maybe, or the lowest order of servants employed in households of members of the Russian nobility, royally rich, who live much of the time in Paris.

Again you may see kneeling upon the soiled floor, with head thrown slightly back as she mumbles her prayers, a Russian lady of great beauty whom perhaps you saw as a contralto star in grand opera the night before. A far cloak worth half its weight in gold slides back from her shoulders. Her fat hands wear regal gems. But she has hurried from her slumbers to the church without even taking trouble to comb her hair. It is tucked raggedly locked under her hat. Her face, sallow and worn, bears little trace of the brilliant makeup it wore last night. The prima donna through all her prayers, even strangers eying her curiously, sees recognizing her. She does not like it. With an instant transition from a prayer to a muttered something quite unlike she turns angrily away. She rises, moves to a place where she cannot be seen, again falls upon the floor and begins where she left off the half finished prayer.

The music is wholly vocal—men's voices, no women's. The most wonderful bass voices in all Paris are heard here. One of the things to do for a traveler in the gay city is to be located on along the Champs Elysees to hear the bass voices in the Russian church. It is near the Arc de Triomphe.

All the Russias—upper, lower, east, west and middle—are searched to find these deep voices and when one is discovered he is in whose throat it resides, he is hoarse, Jew or slit eyed Tartar, peasant, saint or brigand, is persuaded to use it in chanting and singing for the times an church services. Sufficient inducements are offered. His bass voice is more of a qualification for the office he has to perform than his true piety.

St. Patrick's Day Party.

One of the most pleasant social events of the week was a St. Patrick's party given by Mrs. Frances Hand, on Monday evening, March 17, at her beautiful suburban home on Fifth avenue. The affair not only commemorated St. Patrick, but was also in the nature of a surprise tendered Mrs. D. P. Burch, before she moves to her new home, and she was made guest of honor for the evening. Twenty of her lady friends had planned and talked of the coming event for weeks, and the result was that each lady had pieced a beautiful quilt block of green and white, to be presented to her, as a token of their esteem, and in honor of St. Patrick. The surprise was managed with consummate ability by Mrs. S. H. Rosebraugh and was a complete surprise to Mrs. Burch. The handsome residence of the hostess was decorated with palms and a profusion of green hunting, while the American flag showed forth in all its glory, making a charming appearance. The dining room was tastefully decorated with ferns, potted plants and green crepe, with tinsel, green and white predominating throughout. At each cover were little green baskets of bonbons, as souvenirs for the guests.

The evening was occupied in singing songs of "Old Ireland," instrumental music, and a happy social time generally. After refreshments, which were dainty and delicious, Miss Myrta Davis entered the room where the guests were all assembled, bearing the quilt on her arm. This was then presented to Mrs. D. P. Burch, Miss Besta Hutzel making the presentation speech. That pleasurable thrill at encountering something unexpected, was then experienced by Mrs. Burch, and was plainly visible in her countenance. However, she was equal to the occasion and responded in a neat little speech, thanking all for their kind feeling of love to her, as well as for the gift which she prized highly, and will cherish as a memento of the pleasant occasion. About thirty ladies were present and all wore unusually pretty evening costumes green being the prevailing color. Seven of the young ladies came masked causing much merriment for a time.

At midnight all departed for their homes, voting Mrs. Hand a charming hostess, always making whatever she undertakes a perfect success.

For The Bridegroom.

The messenger boys for the United States Express company, have arranged for a reception to Mr. Crisswell, the bridegroom, next Saturday morning, on the occasion of his first trip out. A box, gaily colored, and suitably decorated will be presented to him, which bears the following inscriptions:

"The owners of this little red box were duly married according to the laws of Ohio, March 19, 1902. Signed Messengers U. S. Express Co."

"We the undersigned messengers of the U. S. Express company, do authorize O. K. Crisswell, 6 days off to get married and change boarding houses. In addition to this he may take a wedding trip in the auto coach, from the bride's residence to his newly purchased home on Moul street."

Mr. Crisswell's train box rejoices and complains as follows:

"Ha, ha! I'm off for six days as the boss has laid off to take unto himself another to care for besides me. I am not yet aware of my place. I used to be first, but I suppose now, I'll be second."

This plaint is in bright colors and very loud."
